MWC Progresses in 'Excellence'

by TERESA A. CURTIS
Editor in Chief

Mary Washington College is progressing with its plan of 'Commitment to Excellence' at a rapid pace, according to MWC President William Anderson.

Anderson was speaking to the MWC Board of Visitors who met Friday and Saturday, November 13 and 14.

The BOV discussed many items and passed various resolutions at their meeting. Much of the discussion centered around construction on campus.

The BOV Buildings and Grounds Committee reported that construction on the new library is 60 percent complete and the estimated completion date of June 1988 is still a foreseeable goal.

Phase II of the Battleground facilities is underway, according to the committee, with baseball and softball fields near completion. The regrading of the rugby field will take place after the spring season.

A resolution from the BOV Finance Committee was passed by the Board concerning funds for a new dorm which will be built across from the driveway of Framar House.

The dorm will house 32 students and the completion date is set for August 1, 1988.

Virginia Dalton, Chairperson of the Academic Affairs Committee, reported that the number of early applicants has risen from 106 applicants last year to 162 this year.

Another increase in applications was announced with mid-semester transfer students who wish to live on campus, according to President Anderson.

Last year the college received 124 transfer student applications. This year there are 350 requests.

"We'll be lucky if we can take three or four of those people," said Anderson, attributing the small number of acceptances to the rise in admissions of Fall semester.

BOV Student Affairs Committee Chairman Bennett C. Whitlock said that a committee on safe sex has been formed to educate the faculty, students and physical plant workers on issues such as AIDS.

Bennett said the committee hoped that the "AIDS educational program [will be] a high priority item."

In closing, President Anderson reminded the Board about "Christmas With All the Trimmings" sponsored by the Mary Washington College Center for Historic Preservation which is planned for December 4 through 6.

Southern Living will be covering the program for a feature article at a later date, according to Anderson.

Committee investigates women's studies

by M. JACKSON BEATTIE
Staff Reporter

This fall an informal academic committee led by Dr. Carol Corcoran and Dr. Craig Vasey is investigating whether there is a demand for a Women's Studies Program at Mary Washington College.

The committee formed last Spring, but it gained momentum this year and now meets monthly. Over the past months the committee has been collecting statements from faculty and students from several departments that would take part in the interdisciplinary Women's Studies Program.

Assistant Professor in the Psychology Department, Dr. Corcoran stated, "In the past months we have all become more familiar with new scholarship in the field of Women's Studies in disciplines outside our own."

Dr. Vasey, Assistant Professor in the Philosophy Department said, "I think an important reason for the establishment of a Women's Studies major is to legitimize and recognize this new field of scholarship that is changing the face of liberal arts."

He explained that there are currently an array of courses in the Classics, English, History, Psychology and Sociology departments dealing with women and women's issues.

In fact, according to a survey conducted by Dr. Dan Dervin, one third of the courses in the English Department make a concerted effort to recognize female authors.

"The purpose of the Women Studies Program would be to organize these courses into an academic framework," Vasey elaborated.

Dr. Richard Warner, Chairperson of the History Department stated, "Our department occasionally offers a course titled 'Women's History,' but the issue of supporting the creation of a Women's Studies Program has never come up at a departmental meeting; however, if asked to participate in such a program we would seriously consider it."

One of the main issues the committee is examining is whether the proposed program would be integrated into existing courses or separated as a special area of concentration or minor.

The main problem the committee faces is that the college currently has no system of including a minor into its degree program.

However, the committee has been studying whether these rules should be amended to allow Women's Studies and possibly other fields to operate independently as a minor.

Dr. Vasey feels that the committee should recommend the course that was taught in the fall of 1986 by Janet Wishner, also of the Philosophy Department, titled Introduction to Women's Studies 200, be offered either each year or each semester.

In addition, the committee is looking into whether a senior seminar course in Women's Studies 471 could also be formed.

Assistant Professor in the History Department, John Hughes, is a member of the committee who is a proponent of mainstreaming.

Hughes, who taught the course in Women's History last spring, said "A Women's Studies Program would be an addition to the school, but I am not sure if it is viable at the undergraduate level since the coursework would be quite specialized."

A better idea might be to incorporate important women in the arts and sciences that have been overlooked, so that the importance of women in society is not underestimated in existing classes."

However, according to English Professor Dr. Susan J. Hanna, "The

Feminism Overview

by DEBBIE SCHLUTER
Staff Reporter

Feminism was the controversial issue of the week on Monday, November 9 at 5:30 p.m. in the Campus Center.

An informative overview of the topic was given by two speakers. Dr. Craig Vasey, a philosophy professor, discussed the historical context of feminism.

Barbra Anderson, student coordinator of the MWC chapter of NOW (National Organization for Women), offered her opinions on the social context of feminism.

Approximately twenty-seven people attended the presentation on feminism sponsored by the Skeptics Club.

Vasey explained the background of feminism, that feminism exists as an opposition to patriarchy. To understand feminism, Vasey asserts that one must understand patriarchy—the organization of society whereas "men's interests run the show."

In order to reach an equilibrium between freedoms and rights of men and women, the movement of feminism evolved.

Three different brands of feminism

program would be more effective as a separate minor, since its focus attempts to do something essentially different than any other discipline."

She explained that the thrust of Women's Studies has changed in the last twenty years from simply the recognition of female authors and historical figures.

"Today a new generation of scholars has begun to ask more profound questions such as whether a male author and a female author are essentially the same."

Hanna asks, "If there is a uniquely female perspective in literature or philosophy, have we been only looking at these fields from a male perspective? For if we have, we may need to reexamine the assumptions that the study of literature and philosophy is grounded in."

Anderson explored feminism under social terms. She believes that the supposed inequality of men and women is a result of social influence rather than being biologically innate.

A feminist change in society is advocated by Anderson. The first step in reaching this change is through one's consciousness. Anderson sees most people as being male identified when they should come to terms with being female identified also.

We can stop being a triangle and start being a circle," said Anderson on the relationship between men and women and their identity.

The floor was also opened for questions. Members of the audience participated in questions and answers.

The presentation was informative but it tended to be one-sided. Feminism was discussed in terms of liberal, pro-feminists whereas the other side of the issue was not sufficiently addressed.

Generalities and stereotypes run both ways, especially with the issue of feminism. By only expanding the merits of feminism, the risk of practicing reverse discrimination is taken.

Attention Students

To the students of Mary Washington College:

We are striving to improve the Student Health Center, both in care and programming. To do this, we need your help.

For this reason, we are forming a Student Health Advisory Committee (SHAC) to help us with planning and programming.

As a member of SHAC you will help us identify problem areas and design programs to meet those needs.

SHAC will be responsible for bulletin board displays, a weekly health article, educational advertisements and such things as needs assessments and student satisfaction surveys.

SHAC will work closely with members of the Health Center staff and work hard.

With your help we can have a Health Center truly responsive to you, the students, because it is always aware of and assisted by those it serves.

If you think this is a program you would like to be involved in, please meet with me in the Campus Center, Room 4 on Monday, November 23 at 6 p.m. or Wednesday, November 25 at 10 a.m. I hope to see many of you there.

Fighting Hunger at MWC

In the early 1960's, President John F. Kennedy set two goals for this country. The first was to get a man on the moon by the end of that decade. The second was to eliminate world hunger within his generation's lifetime.

The first goal was accomplished. Millions of dollars and some of the best minds of the generation were applied to the challenge of carrying out a lunar voyage.

The second goal fell by the wayside. For whatever reasons, the vision of a world without hunger was not translated into a national commitment.

Though this nation did not act to live up to its dreams, there have been those who have consistently fought for the elimination of world hunger without worrying about whether or not the Russians were going to beat them to the moon.

Twenty years before Kennedy's call to end world hunger, the Oxford Committee on Famine Relief (Oxfam) was founded in England.

Over the past four decades, Oxfam has gained a global reputation for innovative yet realistic aid to some of the poorest people in the world.

Oxfam has supported small projects that reach into villages and rural areas of the third world where local groups are working to increase their own food production and economic self-reliance.

Although Oxfam concentrates on funding self-help projects, they also provide aid when disaster strikes. This direct aid is followed up by programs to promote local self-reliance.

For example, during the 1984-85 famine in Ethiopia, Oxfam sent needed food and emergency supplies for relief to the stricken areas. Today, they are focusing on agricultural recovery programs and providing farming supplies to help Ethiopian farmers restore production.

Oxfam focuses its energies on the regions of Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean. Its work in Latin America is particularly important, because recently, U.S. government assistance to the region has shifted dramatically from economic to military assistance.

The results of the Reagan administration's militaristic diplomacy are particularly visible in the rural areas of Latin America, where there is less and less money for needed social programs.

This week, the students of Mary Washington College can help provide this much needed assistance to countries.

On Thursday, November 19, students can act against world hunger by participating in a nationwide Fast for World Harvest, coordinated by Oxfam America.

The fast will last from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Thursday, and those wishing to participate should sign up in the Dome Room of Seacobeck Dining Hall during lunch or dinner on Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday of this week.

For every student who signs up and participates in the fast, ARA will donate $1.25 to Oxfam America.

After the fast, a service of unity and hope will be held on Ball Circle at 4:15 p.m. and 6 p.m.

The whole Mary Washington College community is encouraged to participate in this fast. In our society, where we take so much for granted, it will do us good to take an afternoon to reflect on the needy of the world and, in the course of our own reflection, actually help to provide assistance for those who need it.

With a little effort on our part, we can help a lot, and it won't even be half as hard as sending a man to the moon. Please participate in Thursday's Fast for World Harvest.

Friends Remember Chris's Spirit

Chris, our friend, was very special and we loved him. Chris blessed us with many of his talents. He was in many regards, a magnetic person. People were drawn to him because of his musical ability, his intelligence and his overall personality.

Often times Chris would be playing the piano in our lobby and a great many of us would stop and listen. He was very music-oriented and had a great love for his music.

If we ever needed help in a subject, Chris was always there. It didn't matter how busy he was, or what time of day, he would always find the time.

Chris's greatest attribute was his personality. He was warm, considerate, and could always cheer us up. We'll remember Chris for many things, but perhaps the one thing we'll never forget, is the happiness he brought us.

written by Joseph M. Perkins given by Jean E. Seaver

To say that those of us who knew "Chrispy" are fortunate would be an understatement. I think it would be safe to say that none of us have or will ever meet anyone like him.

Anyone around "Chrispy" could see that he lived life to its fullest. It is impossible for me to bring across "Chrispy's" good nature that he was so able to express to everyone he met.

Anyone that came into his room instantly became his friend. He seemed to have had something in common with everyone. When you were talking with him, hours would turn into minutes.

"Chrispy" was the kind of person who didn't need the complicated things in life. His idea of good times was being with a friend or being at home.

When I say home, I don't just mean being in his house with his parents, who he loved very much. But being in the Winchester area with its beautiful mountains and scenery. He once referred to his home as God's Country. If you have ever been there you would understand why.

While "Chrispy" is no longer here to spread his good nature on to others, I hope that those of us who knew him will be changed in a way so that we will be able to continue his spirit of good will on to those who never got a chance to know him.

Samuel M. Carson

I am very grateful to have been so close to Chris for the short time he was with us. He was the ideal roommate.

Even though we were different as could be, he accepted me for who I was, as he did with everyone he met.

Although he loved his music and hated most of mine, he let me control the stereo a good part of the time.

He loved to jam to Def Leppard and Whitesnake but would be more than happy to mellow out with Lee Greenwood.

But that was Chris. He sacrificed so much to make the people in his life happy. He would talk for hours to anyone who happened to stick their head in our door.

He made everyone feel special and important. No matter how things were going, he made the bad times not so bad and the good times even better.

I personally admired Chris. I always wished I could do the things he did and think of those quick one-liners he came up with.

Good times followed him everywhere and I can say for all of us at Westmoreland that the memory of Chris will follow us everywhere also.

Chris was an integral member of our close family. That is why it hurts so much to have lost him so soon. Thank you for everything you've given us, Christopher Paul Goode.

Dean M. Munson

Although his time with us was short and the people he knew were few,

Christopher P. Goode touched our lives in a special way. By his zest for life and compassion for friends Chris made the darkest days seem somehow worthwhile. In our hearts his memory now lives.

May his spirit soar forever.

'Something's Afoot' Strides Into Success

by BETH HILL
Staff Reporter

Throughout its six showings of "Something's Afoot," the MWC Department of Dramatic Arts and Dance captured the attention of its audiences, which packed Klein Theatre for each show.

The play is a murder-mystery-musical-comedy involving six guests at a country estate, three servants and a lost college student seeking refuge.

The owner of the estate, Lord Dudley Rancour, has been murdered, and the guests are forced to stay because of a terrible storm, and to find out who murdered Rancour.

The actors and actresses who performed in the play displayed multi-talents by not only speaking but also singing and dancing.

Each proved his ability through at least one solo provided for him during the show.

The success of the play though, came not just from the actors and actresses. Without the excellent casting of characters, overall direction, choreography and exquisite scenery design, the same effect could not have been produced.

Many people tend to forget about those who work to operate the fixtures on the walls and the other parts of scenery (such as the electrical shock and the gas-emitting telephone), which played an active role as well.

Approximately fifty-seven students participated as members of the production staff, the running crew and the production crew.

There was also a ten member student orchestra accompanying the musical pieces.

A few of the most enjoyable and well-sung numbers include: "Something's Afoot" and "Suspicions," sung by the entire cast; "Carry On," sung by Beth Scott, Susan Maney, Celi Gough and Aileen Lynch-McCulloch (Lettie, Hope, Grace and Miss Tweed respectively); "The Legal Heir," sung by Bryan Higgins (Nigel Rancour); and "I Owe It All," sung by Susan Maney, Aileen Lynch-McCulloch and Johnathan Shipley (who played Geoffrey).

Other members of the cast included Rusty Painter (Flint), William Kemp (Clive), Bonnie Lehem (Dr. Grayburn) and Chris King (Colonel Gillweather).

Through the talent of the actors and actresses, the well-designed and operated scenery and the exceptional orchestra, the audience never seemed to lose interest during the two hour show.

In fact, only a few appropriate moments were without applause, laughter or screams of excitement.

It must be concluded that "Something's Afoot" was a huge success and that hopefully, it is a prediction of the outcome of future plays staged at Mary Washington College this year.

"Battle of the Bands '87"

by PETER MATHIS
Staff Reporter

The 1987 second annual Battle of the Bands was about as diverse as they come, thank God. Admittedly, I had some initial reservations about going because I expected to hear a lot of tiresome (and safe) covers—six renditions of "Louie, Louie," or something like that.

Fortunately though, I couldn't have been more wrong. The six competing bands brought eclecticism to new heights by taking some risks and making—I'll say most of it—work.

The bands pulled their material from such polar opposites as the Sex Pistols, the Temptations, Lisa Lisa and the Violent Femmes, so there was, as the cliché goes "something for everyone."

At the beginning, it looked like it was going to be a long evening. Professional comedian Taylor Mason was the emcee for the night and had just come onstage.

To be perfectly honest, the guy bit, so it was a big relief when the first band, Buddhist Priest came on.

The only thing that can be said for these guys is that they were out of control. Dressed in pseudo-metal fashion, Buddhist Priest broke their vows of non-violence and proceeded to rip their way through classics like AC/DC's "You Shook Me All Night Long" and Twisted Sister's "We're Not Gonna Take It."

I was duly impressed by the power of frontman Kevin Tiernan's voice against the thick sound of the guitars and relentless drumming—he was one of the few vocalists who did not get washed away by instruments.

After comedian Taylor Mason bombed out some more, the second band, Westmoreland, appeared. Another four-piece band (vocals, guitar, bass, drums), Westmoreland was outfitted in typical top-40 fare.

One member wore the traditional jacket and T-shirt and the young female lead singer had the customary high-cut shirt with navel properly exposed.

The group opened their set with Pat Benetar's "Heartbreaker" and continued with songs in similar style, including a few originals, "I Need Your Love" and "Losing My Mind."

The band's sound invoked the rich rapidity of the 70's by way of superfluous guitar and tambourine.

More obnoxious behavior by Taylor Mason ensued before the next band, Mixed Emotions, came onstage.

Mixed Emotions performed a varied selection of songs including Expose's "Let Me Be The One," Bryan Adams' "Summer of '69" and Lisa Lisa's "Lost in Emotion."

An exciting drum solo by Jay Bradshaw led the group into their best received song: U2's "I Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For." Crowd involvement proved that Mixed Emotions at least did justice to the spirit of U2's music.

The next act was probably the most interesting one. A solo performer (though occasionally accompanied by minimal drums and bass) announced only as "Jim" and armed with guitar, performed some of the more progressive music of the night.

The Femmes' "Blister in the Sun" was given the treatment as well as an electrifying version of Jimi Hendrix's "Star-Spangled Banner/Purple Haze."

ple Haze."

The stage presence and confidence of Jim was something to see, and he was the favorite of many in the audience.

After Jim's act, the professional comedian did not, thankfully, reappear. Instead, Professor Stephen Burton came onstage to announce that Taylor Mason had been "sent

TAKE A BREATH

Join the Great American Smokeout on Thursday, November 19. Millions of smokers across the country will take a break and try not to smoke for 24 hours. How about you? Or, if you don't smoke, adopt a smoker for the day and promise to help that friend get through the day without a cigarette!

85-7MM-Rev. 4/87-No. 5680-LE

A FEW QUIT TIPS

Hide all ashtrays, matches, etc.

Lay in a supply of sugarless gum, carrot sticks, etc.

Drink lots of liquids, but pass up coffee & alcohol.

Tell everyone you're quitting for the day.

When the urge to smoke hits, take a deep breath, hold it for 10 seconds, & release it slowly.

Exercise to relieve the tension.

Try the "buddy system," and ask a friend to quit too.

home." Applause and cheers followed.

The next band, Cecil Gupton & the Rabble Rousers, proved to be the best and most popular of all.

Opening up with "Long Tall Sally," the Rousers displayed a good, tight sound that consisted of three guitars, bass and drums.

All of the members showed themselves to be good-humored as well as talented and their laid-back approach to their music was refreshing and just plain fun for the audience.

Following the Rousers was no enviable task, but the next band, Contagious, proved that they could handle it.

What they played is known on the back of album covers as "an all out metal assault." Made up of two guitars, bass, vocals and drums, Contagious laid claims to being the loudest band that will probably ever play in the Great Hall.

The band blasted through metal songs like "Into the Fire" and Metallica's "Seek and Destroy," but the real fire power came during AC/DC's "Sin City."

With explosive dual fret-work by the two guitarists and accented by the screams of their charismatic lead vocalist, Contagious closed their set and ended the Battle of the Bands in true rock fashion.

After it was all over, the announcement of the winners came as no surprise: it was the Rabble Rousers, all the way.

The winning bandmates, who received sixty dollars, were Mark Reeves, James Benvenuto, Pete Keys, Dave Smallwood and Marc Capponi.

Second place, also predicted by many, went to the enigmatic Jim.

Personally, I was satisfied with the judges' choices. My vote for the hottest set also went to the Rabble Rousers. In case you weren't there, here it is: Long Tall Sally, Secret Agent Man, Ain't Too Proud to Beg/Midnight Hour/Ain't Too Proud, Wipeout, Joy to the World.

Basketball Men See Winning Season

by LIN OUTTEN
Staff Reporter

Coming off of a season that produced the ECAC South Regional Tournament champions, the Men's Varsity Basketball will attempt to improve on last year's 16-11 record as they open up their season Friday night against the Captains of Christopher Newport College.

The Eagles have four starters returning this season, but are forced to deal with the loss of MWC's all-time leading scorer, Buddy Hawley, to graduation.

The Eagles lost their first five games of the season last year before Hawley returned to the line-up in January and led the team to a 16-6 record in their last 22 games.

Under normal circumstances, it would look like a bleak situation for any team, but according to coach Tom Davies that's not the case here.

"We have a lot of things going for us this year," he said. "I think we've got some guys that are playing better than they've ever played. Our first scrimmage this year was much better than our first scrimmage last year."

Davies, now in his tenth season at Mary Washington, doesn't think last year's slow start was any indication of the talent the team has without Hawley.

"We just didn't play well early," he said. "Maybe some of our guys were looking over their shoulders, waiting for Buddy to come back."

If we had had to play all last year without Buddy, and had known that was the case, I think we could have won sixteen games anyway."

Hawley, twentieth in Division III All-American voting last season, led the team in scoring, averaging twenty points a game, but the Eagles are returning four starters, all capable of scoring.

Junior John Yurchak was second in scoring last season with fifteen points, Senior Mark Blackwell averaged fourteen points a game and Junior Matt D'Ercole added eleven points, giving the Eagles three returning players scoring in double figures.

Senior Chip Suter scored nearly ten points last season and will again lead the team from the point-guard position.

Probable starter, Junior Bob Smith will be called on to strengthen the line-up along with reserve-guard Mike Avis, who led the team in shooting percentage last season, hitting over half of his shots and connecting on nearly half of his three point tries. D'Ercole and Blackwell will handle most of the rebounding duties.

Davies doesn't see sixteen wins again this year as an unrealistic goal. He seems pleasantly surprised by his team's play so far and said, "I expect a lot of production from our bench this year."

Two new members of the team who could strengthen the bench are Freshman guard Eric Barfield, whose quickness could cause problems for opposing teams, and Sophomore transfer Jeff Mauzy, who at 6'5" collected sixteen rebounds in a scrimmage against Newport News Apprentice.

The Eagles home opener is Saturday night against Randolph Macon at Goolrick Hall. Game time is 8:00 p.m. and will follow the J.V. game against Fork Union.

Women Work Hard to Improve Last Year's Season Record

by NOELLE LABAR
Staff Reporter

The Mary Washington College Women's basketball team is practicing hard in order to get ready for the tough season ahead of them. After last year's dismal record of 2-22, Coach Gallahan is looking for improvement in the win column.

Despite the loss of the team's two leading scorers and leading rebounder all who graduated last May, Coach Gallahan sees the possibilities of having a really good team. "We have a young team made up of nine Freshman. We have alot of talent in many different positions."

Gallahan also commented that the team plays a very tough schedule. "We will be playing several tough teams who were Division III NCAA contenders last year, as well as, some Division II teams."

"We are lacking experience and it's going to take time to learn the system. The girls, however, show alot of enthusiasm and potential. I think they will learn quickly and face up the competition."

Charron, Melloni Cook, Diane DeFalco, Beth Legum, Vikki Lenhart, Julie Moss, Robin Peck and Greta Rudolph.

The team will began their season with an Alumni game on Saturday, November 14 and will play a scrimmage on Tuesday, November 17 at 8:00pm against an AAU team called the Blue Angels.

Gallahan thinks these two pre-season games will be good experience and will give the team a better feel for how they play together. Gallahan is very excited about working with the new, young, enthusiastic team. She has an optimistic and positive outlook on the 1987-88 basketball season.
